CARTE BLANCHE - GLORIA ZEIN
I CAN'T STOP THE DANCING CHICKEN

TUE 22 MAY 2012 – SAT 23 JUNE 2012

GOETHE INSTITUT

Sprache. Kultur. Deutschland.

Inspired by the Goethe-Institut's film archive, artist Gloria Zein has chosen a selection of films from the past 50 years to explore the spaces of freedom that enable and result from attempts of resistance. In moments of crisis, decisions become vital: they facilitate action, change and a re-gaining of control; they can be deliberate or they can be rash; they can trigger chain reactions and cause total loss of control. Decisions can also back-fire. There is also the decision to do nothing: passivity or evasiveness may become a form of silent resistance.

LOSERS AND WINNERS

SAT 23 JUNE 3.30PM

SHORTS

A number of screenings will be accompanied by short works by the artists Fiona Chambers, Marcus Coates and Anita Delaney and by director Helke Sander.

FIONA CHAMBERS

Fiona Chambers' practice is concerned with societal trends, mass culture, communication and the construction of meaning. She appropriates from a wide range of sources including television, print media and the internet in an often crude attempt to define, mock, or celebrate the sociological status quo.

MARCUS COATES

In Marcus Coates' performances and Shamanic rituals, his earnestness as a Shaman, the absurdity of the Shamanic ritual in a contemporary setting and his deadpan documentary style inadvertently expose class structures and questions the need to reconnect with our origins.

ANITA DELANEY

Working mainly in moving image, Irish artist Anita Delaney creates a world of and for the outsider. Her work traces a sensibility balanced between failure, the humorous and the abject and seeks to determine a strategy for how to live as a weakling.

HELKE SANDER

A key figure of the new German Cinema and the German feminist movement, Helke Sander challenged the male dominance in the student protest movement of the 60s and has continuously demanded and worked to establish equal opportunities for women, especially working mothers.
